

fibril cluster

Tom Brinck

5/6/03

tracheotomize the potential of troubled affect struggling with the conflict of wealth accumulation and the darkest quest for meaning and the upside not the exchange with every blood-letting accommodation thank no one thank the end is near nearly I wish I'd try to make the eclectic the eye desire but the bright dot upon the pupil pulls the mind activity from the clutch of any limited scan causing caustic outbursts of random lurch and disengage earnest compulsion of red laser in pursuit of the dark hole of focused vision agonize scrape claw tortured string of dripping fibril cluster and nihilist raw pungency stray with intended pleasure that passes for the triad of intent—death shame and tragedy—coming into the forum that would deny the self the sane